Reinvigating Vaishnavism through Gaudiya Math in 20th century

-Aditi Bose

Kedarnath Datta was born on 2nd September, 1838 in the district of Nadia which was around a hundred kilometers from north of Calcutta. He belonged to an influential Kāyastha caste, which for generations had worked as scribes and writers in the royal courts of India and were often landowners as well. <sup>1</sup> Kedarnath became a member of the intellectual elite of Calcutta and occasionally produced articles for the Hindu Intelligencer, a popular periodical edited by his uncle. He was a student of the Hindu Charitable Institution, an initiative that offered Hindu students an alternative to Christian missionary education.

He was exposed to the rationalism of the Brahmo Samaj as Keshub Sen was his close associate. He started to analyze Christianity in keeping with his own theistic leanings. In his youth, Kedarnath had been in contact with the
