Brief description of the event:

The function started with Bhav Nritya based on Ganesh Vandana, which was performed by students from the department, Tuhelia Ghosh and Srishti Shaswat. The program was then formally inaugurated with the lighting of the lamp by college principal Dr. Tania Chakraverty, guest speaker Dr. Alka Saraogi, secretary Shri P.K. Sharma, and professors from the Hindi department. In her welcome address, Principal Dr.Chakraverty underscored the broad socio-cultural significance of Hindi, stating that this was not just an event for the Hindi department, but for the entire college.

'Ganga Jamni Tahzib ki Tashkeel Mein Urdu Ka Hissa' book edited by Dr. Shaheen Parveen was also released.

Department Head Alpana Nayak then introduced the speaker and invited her to the lecture 'Smriti Itihas Aur Katha : Ek Lekhak Ki Drishti' Dr. Saraogi said feelings and emotions have been embedded in our soil for years. They are the memories of our ancestors, and Hindi literature connects with us in a way that is impossible in any other literature, said Dr. Saraogi. She specifically highlighted the socio-cultural life of Kolkata and the Marwari community's experiences of migration, memory, and identity in the context of her works. Explaining the interrelationship between memory, history, and narrative, Dr. Saraogi's remarks thus focused on viewing memory as a vital source of history and on bringing to light, through literature, the voices and experiences that often remain unrecorded in official historical documents.

On this occasion, competitions for Kavya-Aawriti and Kavya- posters were also held. Sanjana Jaiswal of Calcutta University won first place, Shaista Ali of Shri Shikshayatan College won second place, and Md. Zeeshan of Jogesh Chandra Choudhury College won third place in Kavya Aawriti competition. In the Kavya-poster competition, Rupasa Mondal of Bangbasi College, Itika Kumari Saw of Bethune College, and Tania Roy of Bangbasi College won first, second and third places, respectively. The program was conducted by students Nidhi Dave and Alfia Mazhar. The program concluded with a vote of thanks by Prof. Sindhu Mehta.

Outcome:

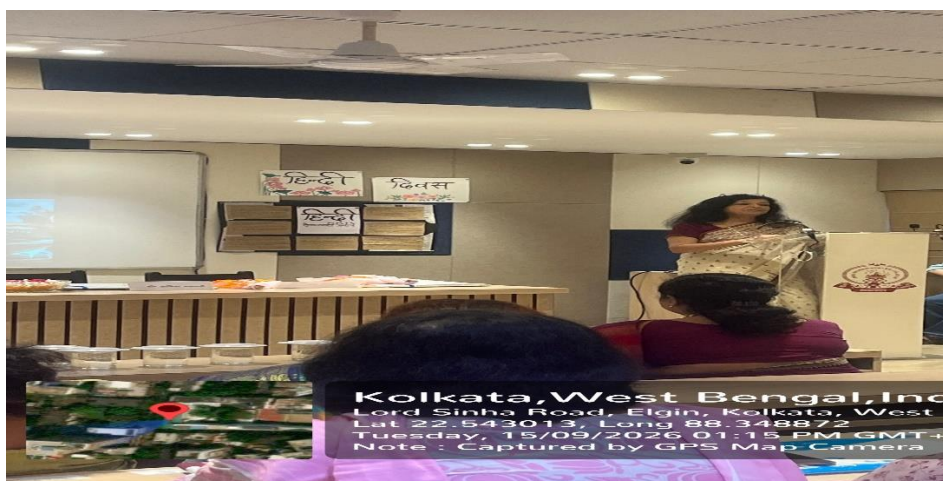

Participants understand that while history relies on verified documentation, memory fills in emotional gaps. A writer's perspective merges both to recreate a more holistic truth.

The seminar highlights how creative narratives give a voice to marginalized groups or subaltern communities whose memories are often omitted from official historical records. Scholars analyse how writers use fiction, metaphors, and literary tools to transform dry chronological data or fragmented trauma memories into engaging stories it is actively shaped by their unique social, political, and cultural realities.

The discussions encourage students and researchers to adopt a cross-disciplinary methodology combining History, Sociology, and Literature.

The seminar underlines the importance of recording folklore, oral histories, and family testimonies before they are lost to time.
